

Nothing Like it Ever Written.

JUST PUBLISHED.

The Physician's Wife;

AND THE

THINGS THAT PERTAIN TO HER LIFE.

BY

ELLEN M. FIREBAUGH.

Gracefully written, full of genuine humor, and true to nature, this little volume is a treasure that will lighten and brighten many an hour of care and worry.

The author, the wife of one of Illinois' well-known physicians, dedicates her book to Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, who has accepted the compliment in a charming and graceful letter expressing her appreciation.

The Publishers are content, without further comment of their own, to let others—READERS AND CRITICS, PRESS AND PUBLIC—express their opinion concerning this book.

Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, one of the most widely-read and greatly-loved women writers of this age, and herself a physician's wife, writes: "It is such a real record. I am sure you will find you have touched chords which will find echoes in the hearts of numberless physicians' wives."

Dr. H. M. Lyman, Professor of Principles and Practice of Medicine in Rush Medical College, Chicago, writes: "'The Physician's Wife' is a very readable volume. My wife is now at it with a great deal of relish."

Dr. Willis P. King, of Kansas City, says: "I have enjoyed the book very much. It is well written, the style is good,—showing a cultivated, original mind, a keen observation on the part of the author, a good generalizer, and the points are well taken."

[OVER.]

Dr. Dan Milliken, of Hamilton, Ohio, writes: "Mrs. Firebaugh has much humor and a rare gift of expression. The book has given me a great deal of pleasure, and, more than that, it has pleased members of my family who have no near interest in the author."

Dr. C. B. Johnson, of Champaign, Ills., says: "I don't know when I have had more genuine pleasure than came to me from reading this book. I was sorry when I came to the end."

Dr. J. W. Rutledge, of Minneapolis, writes: "Mrs. Firebaugh has portrayed in a happy vein of humor and truthfulness the part of a physician's wife and the physician himself. I hope it will find its way into the hands of every doctor in the land. It will be pleasing for the old fellows who have grown gray in the business and for those who are beginning,—a pleasant reminder not to neglect that indispensable part, the better half."

Dr. John W. McCullough, Alliston, Ontario, writes: "I am glad to have had the pleasure of reading your splendid little book, 'The Physician's Wife,' notwithstanding that it has given my wife, who is 'one of them,' a chance to say, 'It's exactly like you, Jack.' We all have faults, and no doubt it does us good to be occasionally gently reminded of them, as you so very nicely do."

Dr. Philip Zenner, of Cincinnati, writes: "I can scarcely speak in high enough terms of 'The Physician's Wife.' Perhaps the best I can say is that after picking it up I never put it down again except when it was absolutely necessary. I read from the first word on the fly-leaf to the last page, nor need I say that the book is charming and that every page gave me delight."

From Medical Record: "The taking title, the chastely modest style, the domestic complexion of the story, and the spirited and graphic description of life-scenes make it a very entertaining little book. Mrs. Firebaugh appreciates all from her wifely stand-point and tells it with a sweet pathos and chaste humor which gives her effort its main charm. We visit the doctor's patients, we hear their stories, appreciate their oddities, sympathize with their distresses, and become a part of the landscape as we drive with him through fresh country lanes, past fragrant woods, and over breezy hills. Many a young, bachelor, in a metropolitan flat, whose only conveyance is the crowded street-car, would gladly shift situations and try his luck at being the partner of such a better-half."

From The Spirit of the Times: "It is full of good stories about doctors, capitally told, and of good advice to doctors and their wives, sincerely given. No one can read it without seeing that every word is, like the illustrations, drawn from life."

From Cincinnati Lancet-Clinic: "This small volume of 185 pages, admirably presented by the publishers, is a most charming book. It sparkles with wit and humor, and touches of nature illuminate every page. Every physician and every physician's wife will find delightful reading here; nor need one be either the one or the other to find equal pleasure in its perusal."

From Medical Brief: "She has done her work well, and we hope that every one of our large list of physicians who has a wife will secure a copy for her, and to those who have not it will afford very interesting reading."

From American Medico-Surgical Bulletin: "There is an ever-present vein of humor, quaint in itself and charming, and many amusing incidents, well drawn and true to life, which evince the author's knowledge of her subject; while her versatility and power of expression would lead the casual reader to suppose them to be the mere creation of a fertile brain."

From Chicago Clinical Review: "A nicely printed and attractive book to be read by the doctor's wife, and by the doctor himself, during those moments when all is still, the flames upon the hearth burn low, and the mind is charmed into reverie. It is frequently lively and altogether entertaining."

From The Prescription: "It is a helpful book, a true book drawn from an experience which is worth relating, and worth the publishers printing in the handsome style that the F. A. Davis Company have done, and for which they are famous. We predict for it a large sale and hearty reception."

From Pacific Record of Medicine and Surgery: "It is not only euphonious in diction, truthful in narrative, but presents vividly to the mind's eye a true illustration of the trials and struggles of a physician's life. The writer has a genius that, cultivated, would enable her husband to dispense with the paltry pay of the profession."

From Dominion Medical Monthly: "It is worth reading, there is so much of common sense and genuine heartiness about it."

From Homœopathic Physician: "An hour will not be wasted spent with this little volume."

From Medical Times and Hospital Gazette, London, Eng.: "We would recommend every medical man to present his wife with a copy, and to read it himself."

From The Sunday School Times: "The general public as well, having an interest in whatever concerns this universal family friend, will find here many profitable hints, while enjoying fully the author's subtle humor and keen insight into human nature."

From The American Medical Journal: "The book is replete with amusing incidents, and its perusal calls up the reminiscences in a doctor's life. Every doctor should read it, his wife especially."

From Pittsburgh Medical Review: "To many it will recall scenes of the old homestead and days of youthful home-life, that, in the excitement and hurry of the city, are dear to the mind when fond recollections present them to view."

From North American Journal of Homœopathy: "It is a plain, unassuming, simple narrative, but there are passages in it that will strike home to every professional reader and lead him off in most profound reverie. That some of the scenes are from life cannot be doubted; in that fact in great part resides the charm of the book."

From Southern California Practitioner: "It is bright, sparkling, and true to nature. The stories are fresh and, being from personal experience, are new, although similar circumstances have probably occurred in the lives of most physicians' wives. It abounds in wit and humor."

From Meyer Bros.' Druggist: "If a pharmacist is anxious for some nice present to send a physician as a token of friendship (business or otherwise), this is just the article desired."

From The Medical Summary: "We have not the space to present details of its contents; but suffice it to say, buy this book if you have a wife: she will undoubtedly enjoy reading it; if you have no wife, buy it anyway."

From Pharmaceutical Era: "Her homely, simple recitals of the trials, cares, sorrows, and joys of the wife of the country practitioner appeal strongly to the sensibilities, the frequent bits of pathos and humor rendering each page fascinating and holding the reader's attention to the end. Doctors all, and their wives, too, should read this little work."

From The Union Signal: "This volume gives, in its humorous and yet pathetic pages, many a really helpful glimpse into the life of that much-tried and not very much-noticed member of society, the doctor's wife."

CROWN OCTAVO, 200 PAGES, WITH 44 ORIGINAL CHARACTER ILLUSTRATIONS AND A FRONTISPIECE PORTRAIT OF THE AUTHOR; HANDSOMELY BOUND IN EXTRA CLOTH, $1.25 NET.

✂ SPECIAL LIMITED EDITION.—First 500 copies beautifully printed in PHOTOGRAVURE ink on extra-quality Enameled Paper, with wide margins, showing the illustrations with excellent effect. Very beautifully and attractively bound in FINE VELLUM CLOTH and LEATHER. Price, $3.00 net. The Publishers reserve the right to increase this price without notice.

THE F. A. DAVIS COMPANY, Publishers,
1914-16 Cherry St., Philadelphia.

BRANCH OFFICES.

117 W. Forty-Second St., New York City, U. S. A.

9 Lakeside Building, 214-220 S. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

FOR SALE BY ALL BOOKSELLERS.